

Student/Research Assistant (m/f/d), 8 hrs./week

The Institute for Interdisciplinary Research on Conflict and Violence (IKG) is looking for a student/research assistant to support the project "Protest and Social Cohesion: Local Conflict Dynamics in Comparison". The position starts as soon as possible and is initially limited to six months. The project examines local protests in Germany, Hungary, and France. In addition to the project lead, Prof. Dr. Priska Daphi, the project team also includes Dr. Monika Onken. The project is carried out as part of the nationwide Research Institute Social Cohesion, funded by the BMFTR (www.fgz-risc.de).

Your tasks:

- Support with collecting and processing French-language interviews
- Support with data collection and processing, in particular for a protest event analysis based on French newspaper articles
- Support with qualitative text analysis
- Support with literature reviews for the project
- Support with organizing events
- Assisting with publications

We offer:

- An insight into empirical social movement research
- A varied and diverse range of tasks
- A friendly team
- The possibility of flexible working hours
- The possibility of remote work

Your profile:

- Very good command of French; good German and/or English skills
- Completed bachelor's degree and/or ongoing studies in sociology, political science, cultural studies, or a related discipline
- Interest in social movement and protest research as well as questions of social cohesion
- Interest in empirical research
- Careful and highly precise way of working
- Ability to work in a team

What we would also like to see:

- Practical and/or theoretical knowledge of empirical protest event analysis, or willingness to familiarize yourself with the method

We look forward to receiving your application (cover letter, CV, and references if applicable). Please do not include a photo with your application. Please send it as a single PDF document by September 13, 2026 to Monika.Onken@uni-bielefeld.de. Interviews will take place via Zoom between September 21 and September 25, 2026. If you have any questions, please feel free to contact Monika Onken.
